

Congressional Research Service

Informing the legislative debate since 1914

Suspension of the Rules in the House: Principal Features

Updated January 6, 2025

Congressional Research Service

<https://crsreports.congress.gov>

98-314

Suspension of the rules is a procedure that the House of Representatives often uses on the floor to act expeditiously on legislation. This procedure is governed primarily by clause 1 of House Rule XV. When a bill or some other matter is considered “under suspension,” floor debate is limited, all floor amendments are prohibited, and a two-thirds vote is required for final passage.

Typically, a Member whom the Speaker has recognized will say, for example, “I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 1234.” By making that motion, the Member triggers the use of the suspension procedure under Rule XV. However, this same procedure can be used for other legislative purposes. For example, a Member can move to suspend the rules and agree to a conference report, or concur in a Senate amendment to a House bill, or take some other action.

There are nine principal features of the suspension procedure.

1. The Speaker controls the use of this procedure. No Member has a right to make a suspension motion. The Speaker decides whom to recognize for suspension motions. The process for selecting measures for suspension usually begins in the committee with jurisdiction over the legislation. If there is bipartisan agreement in the committee that a measure is a good candidate for suspension, committee leaders make that recommendation to the Speaker.
2. Suspension motions are in order only on Mondays, Tuesdays, and Wednesdays. The House could agree to consider suspension motions on other days by, for example, agreeing to a resolution reported by the Rules Committee for that purpose.
3. There is only, at most, a total of 40 minutes of debate on a suspension motion. Time control is often divided between the chairman and the ranking minority member of the committee or subcommittee with jurisdiction over the bill. However, if the ranking minority member supports the bill, another Member who opposes it can claim control of half the time for debate.
4. When a bill is considered under suspension, no floor amendments are in order. The Member making the motion, however, can include amendments as part of his or her motion. In that case, the Member moves to suspend the rules and pass the bill as amended. The amendments are not voted on separately: There is a single vote to suspend the rules and pass the bill with the amendments. These amendments might be those formally agreed to in a public meeting of the committee of jurisdiction, or they might be the product of informal negotiations.
5. A two-thirds vote of the House is required to pass a bill under suspension of the rules. This is a two-thirds vote of the Members present and voting, a quorum being present. If a suspension motion fails to receive the required two-thirds vote, the House can consider the bill in question again. The House could, for example, take up and pass the bill under the terms of a rule from the Rules Committee, a process that requires only simple majority support.
6. After the 40 minutes of debate, there is a single vote on suspending the rules and passing the bill. The House does not vote first on whether to suspend the rules and then on whether to pass the bill. Both questions are decided by one vote.

7. The Speaker can postpone roll call votes on suspension motions until later on the same day or within the next two legislative days¹ and cluster them to occur one after the other. When there is a series of such roll-call votes, Members have 15 minutes to vote on the first suspension motion, but they usually have only five minutes to vote on each of the other motions.
8. There is no requirement that a bill must be reported from committee before the House can consider it under suspension. One advantage of the suspension procedure is that the committee to which a bill was referred does not have to meet formally to vote on reporting it or to prepare a written report on the bill.
9. The suspension procedure automatically waives all points of order against the bill (or other action) and against its consideration. The procedure suspends all rules of the House except those that govern the suspension procedure itself.

There is no suspension calendar. Instead, during the last floor session of each week, a member of the majority party leadership usually makes a public announcement on the floor about the bills that have been scheduled tentatively for consideration under suspension during the following week. Bills scheduled to be considered under suspension of the rules are generally made available in advance at <http://docs.house.gov/floor/>.

For additional information, see the Parliamentarian's notes following clause 1 of Rule XV in the House Rules and Manual; pages 907-915 of House Practice; and volume 6, chapter 21, sections 9-15, of Deschler's Precedents.²

Author Information

Elizabeth Rybicki
Specialist on Congress and the Legislative Process

¹ A "legislative day" begins when the House meets after an adjournment and ends when the House next adjourns.

² These resources are available on the website of the Government Publishing Office: House Rules and Manual at <https://www.govinfo.gov/app/collection/HMAN>, House Practice at <https://www.govinfo.gov/collection/house-practice?path=/GPO/House%20Practice>, and Deschler's Precedents at <https://www.govinfo.gov/collection/precedents-of-the-house?path=/GPO/Precedents%20of%20the%20U.S.%20House%20of%20Representatives>.

Acknowledgments

This report was written by Stanley Bach, a former Senior Specialist in the Legislative Process at CRS. The listed author updated the report and can respond to inquiries from congressional clients on the subject.

Disclaimer

This document was prepared by the Congressional Research Service (CRS). CRS serves as nonpartisan shared staff to congressional committees and Members of Congress. It operates solely at the behest of and under the direction of Congress. Information in a CRS Report should not be relied upon for purposes other than public understanding of information that has been provided by CRS to Members of Congress in connection with CRS's institutional role. CRS Reports, as a work of the United States Government, are not subject to copyright protection in the United States. Any CRS Report may be reproduced and distributed in its entirety without permission from CRS. However, as a CRS Report may include copyrighted images or material from a third party, you may need to obtain the permission of the copyright holder if you wish to copy or otherwise use copyrighted material.