A Survey of House and Senate Committee Rules on Subpoenas

Updated November 12, 2021

Summary

House Rule XI, clauses 2(m)(1) and (3), authorizes House committees and subcommittees to issue subpoenas for the attendance of witnesses and the production of documents. Senate Rule XXVI, paragraph 1 authorizes Senate committees and subcommittees to subpoena witnesses and documents. In turn, most House and Senate committees have adopted their own rules on subpoena provisions containing procedures for exercising this grant of power from their parent chamber.

Committee rules may cover authorization, issuance, and service of subpoenas; may cover just one or two of these actions; or may be silent on exercise of the subpoena power. A subpoena must be authorized pursuant to committee rules. Once authorized, if the committee seeks to take the next step, a subpoena must be issued pursuant to committee rules—signed and given to an individual to serve a subpoena to the person named in it.

Most House and Senate committees have included in their rules one or more provisions on committees' and subcommittees' power to authorize subpoenas by majority vote. Most House committees have also delegated to their chair the power to authorize subpoenas. Many of these rules delegating authority also require the chair to consult or notify the committee's ranking minority member.

Most Senate committees' subpoena rules delegate the power to authorize subpoenas to the chair with the agreement of the ranking minority member.

In addition to rules on authorizing subpoenas, the rules of most committees in both chambers also address issuing subpoenas. Most House committees' rules delegate authority to issue subpoenas to the chair, while several committees allow another committee member who has been designated by the committee to sign a subpoena. Most Senate committees' rules delegate authority to issue subpoenas to the chair and allow another committee member designated by the chair to sign a subpoena.

Some committees' rules enable subcommittees to authorize subpoenas; other committees' rules do not explicitly provide this authority.

Requirements or limitations pertaining to subpoenas may appear in committees' rules, such as conditions placed on a chair's exercise of subpoena authority or on a ranking minority member's role in authorizing a subpoena.

Committees' other procedural rules affect scheduling and conducting meetings to authorize a subpoena. These other rules may deal with the notice for and agenda of a meeting, the quorum to conduct business, and voting.

Introduction

House and Senate rules provide committees and subcommittees authority to subpoena witnesses and documents. Committees' subpoena power is defined thus: "The authority granted to committees by the rules of their respective houses to issue legal orders requiring individuals to appear and testify, or to produce documents pertinent to the committee's functions, or both."¹ Most committees have adopted rules containing procedures for exercising this power.²

Committee rules may cover authorization, issuance, and service of subpoenas; may cover just one or two of these actions; or may be silent on exercise of the subpoena power. A subpoena must be authorized and issued pursuant to committee rules—signed and given to an individual to serve the subpoena on the person named in it.³

Most House and Senate committees have specifically included in their rules one or more provisions on committees' and subcommittees' power to authorize subpoenas by majority vote.⁴ Most House committees have also delegated to their chair the power to authorize subpoenas. Many of these rules delegating authority also require the chair to consult or notify the committee's ranking minority member.

Most Senate committees' subpoena rules delegate the power to authorize subpoenas to the chair with the agreement of the ranking minority member.

Most Senate committees also have rules on committee authorization of subpoenas, and some have rules on subcommittee authorization.

In addition to rules on authorizing subpoenas, the rules of most committees in both chambers also address issuing subpoenas. Most House committees' rules delegate authority to issue subpoenas to the chair, while several committees allow another committee member who has been designated by the committee to sign a subpoena. Most Senate committees' rules delegate authority to issue subpoenas to the chair and allow another committee member designated by the chair to sign a subpoena.

This report begins with an explanation of how to analyze committees' subpoena rules. The report then first surveys House committees' subpoena rules, followed by a survey of Senate committees' subpoena rules. Both surveys begin with a brief description of chamber rules, followed by a short summary of that chamber's committees' rules that are ancillary to committee subpoena authorization procedures or appear in only one or two committees' rules. The surveys each include a table that compares the chamber's committees' rules on authorizing and issuing subpoenas, with table notes adding further detail.⁵

⁵ There are means besides subpoenas for congressional committees to obtain information, especially from the executive

All committee rules analyzed in this report are rules adopted at the beginning of the 117th Congress. The committees published their rules in the Congressional Record, complying with their chamber’s rule on publication. All rules were published in the Record before March 31, 2021.

House Rules on Subpoenas

Rule XI, clauses 2(m)(1) and (3), authorizes committees and subcommittees to issue subpoenas for the attendance of witnesses and the production of documents.⁶ Clause 2(m)(3) requires authorization by a committee or subcommittee, “a majority being present.”⁷ Under Rule XI, clause 2(h)(3), committee rules may establish the quorum for debating a subpoena at no less than one-third the membership of the committee.

Rule XI, clause 2(m)(3), also allows committees to adopt rules to delegate the authorization and issuance of subpoenas to a committee’s chair “under such rules and under such limitations as the committee may prescribe.” This same subparagraph requires subpoenas to be signed by the chair or by a member who has been designated by the committee.

Rule XI, clause 2(m)(3)(B), allows a committee or subcommittee to designate a return for documents other than at a meeting or hearing.⁸ Clause 2(m)(3)(C) allows enforcement of a subpoena only as authorized or directed by the House.⁹

Rule X, clause 10(b), makes Rule XI, clause 2(a), requiring the adoption of committee rules, applicable to select and joint committees unless the House has decided otherwise. Clause 2(a) requires that committee rules incorporate the other provisions of Rule XI, clause 2, including clause (m), which provides for subpoena authority.¹⁰ branch, which include the voluntary appearance of witnesses; writing requirements for reports or studies into law; resolutions of inquiry (see CRS Report R40879, Resolutions of Inquiry: An Analysis of Their Use in the House, 1947-2017, by Christopher M. Davis); and existing provisions of law, such as Title 5, Section 2954, of the U.S. Code, which requires an executive agency to submit information requested by the House Committee on Oversight and Reform, or by any seven members of the committee, or by the Senate Committee on Homeland Security and Governmental Affairs, or by any five members of the committee. Depositions and other oversight techniques, which may include the exercise of a committee’s subpoena authority, are discussed in CRS Report RL30240, Congressional Oversight Manual, coordinated by Christopher M. Davis, Todd Garvey, and Ben Wilhelm.

⁶ House Rule XI, clauses 2(k)(5) and (6), allow a committee to dispose of requests to subpoena additional witnesses, as requested by a witness or by others, including committee members.

⁸ Return in this rule refers to instructions to the individual named on when and where to respond to the subpoena with the documents demanded. This rule allows a committee or subcommittee to issue a subpoena to an individual both to appear and to provide documents but to deliver the documents at another time than the hearing or meeting at which the individual is directed to appear. If the subpoena is for documents only, the delivery may occur outside of the time designated for a hearing or meeting of the committee or subcommittee authorizing the subpoena.

¹⁰ For examples of the House deciding to alter the applicability of Rule XI, clause 2 to select committees, see Sec. 4 of H.Res. 567 (113th Congress, 2013-2014.) and Section 5 of H.Res. 503 (117th Congress, 2021-2022). The resolutions provided that the chairs would authorize and issue subpoenas and also exempted the select committees from the requirement of adopting committee rules. The resolutions that initially established the Select Committee on the

House Committees' Rules on Subpoenas

If a committee meets to consider one or more subpoenas for a witness, witnesses, or documents, it meets in a markup session, and members may offer amendments and motions, make points of order, and engage the relevant procedures and procedural strategy that could also occur in a markup of legislation. When a House committee or subcommittee will consider authorizing a subpoena, the committee's rules on scheduling, notice, open meetings, quorum, and voting apply. Committees' rules also mirror a House rule requiring a majority to be actually present to report (Rule XI, clause 2(h)(1)). The House Office of General Counsel maintains subpoena-related forms to assist committees and may advise committees on subpoenas.

Most committees' rules delegate authority to issue subpoenas to their chair, but many committees with such a rule also require the chair to consult or notify the ranking minority member. In many committees, subcommittees may authorize and issue subpoenas subject to specified conditions. Some committees' rules are not explicit on procedures for subcommittees to authorize subpoenas. The principal attributes of committees' subpoena rules are analyzed and displayed in Table 1. Table 2 provides the relevant texts of the subpoena rules.

Other provisions pertaining to subpoenas appear in committee rules but may not be included in Table 1 or Table 2. Generally, these rules are ancillary to subpoena authorization rules. They are described here.

Several committees reference the authority of the House to enforce a subpoena issued by the committee or, if permitted by committee rules, its subcommittees. These committees are the Committees on Agriculture, Appropriations, Armed Services, Oversight and Reform, and Transportation and Infrastructure.

In addition, several committees have rules stating that the committees may cite offenders to the House for contempt.¹¹ The rules of the Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence specify that authority while establishing conditions prior to the referral of a contempt recommendation. "Reasonable" notice of a meeting to consider a contempt recommendation must be given to all committee members. The committee must meet and consider the contempt allegations. The individual who is the subject of the allegations must have an opportunity to respond in writing or in person as to why or why not the individual should be held in contempt. The committee by majority vote must agree to recommend a contempt citation to the House.¹²

The Committee on Ethics has five rules related to subpoenas separate from their authorization and issuance. One rule provides that "all evidence or testimony" submitted pursuant to a subpoena by an investigative subcommittee are "deemed to have been taken or produced in executive session."

Modernization of Congress and the Select Committee on the Climate Crisis in the 116th Congress and the Select Committee on Economic Disparity and Fairness in Growth in the 117th Congress did not provide subpoena authority but did allow the select committees to submit subpoena recommendations to the relevant standing committees. See H.Res. 6 (116th Congress, 2019-2020) and H.Res. 8 (117th Congress, 2021-2022).

¹¹ According to the House Parliamentarian, the Supreme Court, in its rulings, has established that "an individual who fails or refuses to comply with a House subpoena may be cited for contempt of Congress" (House Practice, p. 457). Presumably, committees have the authority to cite subpoena offenders to the House, even if they do not specify such authority in their rules. Contempt of Congress is defined as "Willful obstruction of the proper functions of Congress. Most frequently, it is a refusal to obey a subpoena to appear and testify before a committee or to produce documents demanded by it" (Congressional Quarterly's American Congressional Dictionary, p. 66; see also CRS Report R45653, Congressional Subpoenas: Enforcing Executive Branch Compliance, by Todd Garvey and House Practice, pp. 457-462).

¹² Six additional committees (Agriculture, Ethics, Homeland Security, House Administration, Oversight and Reform, and Veterans' Affairs) state in their rules that the "committee may cite the offender to the House [or House of Representatives] for contempt."

Two rules relate specifically to subpoenas issued by adjudicatory subcommittees. First, a subpoena for documents may specify terms of return other than a meeting or hearing of the subcommittee. Second, a subpoena requiring a witness to appear must be served “sufficiently in advance” of the scheduled appearance to allow the witness to prepare and to retain counsel. The fourth rule proscribes committee members and staff from disclosing to a person outside the committee the name of a witness subpoenaed to testify or produce documents. The final rule appears to apply to all subpoenaed witnesses, covering, with exceptions, travel expenses at the per-diem rate established by the House Administration Committee.

The Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure has a similar rule on expenses of subpoenaed witnesses.

The rules of the Committee on Homeland Security allow the chair with the concurrence of the ranking minority member or the committee to include provisions in a subpoena that “prevent” the disclosure of the committee’s demand for information “when deemed necessary for the security of information or the progress of an investigation.” Such provisions may prohibit witnesses and their counsel from revealing the committee’s inquiry. Another rule pertaining to a subpoena for documents allows the committee to specify terms of return other than a regularly scheduled meeting of the committee.

Two committees—Rules and Small Business—delegate subpoena authority to the chair if the House has adjourned for more than three days. In recent practice, the House has not adjourned for more than three days, preventing the use of this provision in the committees’ rules.¹³

Five committees also have rules on service of subpoenas. Four committees—Budget, Financial Services, Natural Resources, and Rules—provide that a subpoena may be served by any person designated by the chair or by the member authorized by the committee to issue subpoenas. The Intelligence Committee’s rule allows the chair to designate a person to serve a subpoena.

The Intelligence Committee’s rules also specifically require a copy of the committee’s rules to be attached to any subpoena.

Explanation of Tables 1 and 2: Committee Subpoena Requirements, House Committees’ Rules, 117th Congress

Table 1 compares House committees’ rules in the 117th Congress on whose authority a subpoena may be authorized and issued and on notifying members of a committee that a subpoena has been issued. Committees are listed in alphabetical order in the left column, with the Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence and the Select Committee to Investigate the January 6th Attack on the United States Capitol appearing at the end of the table.¹⁴ The table headings contain key terms describing committees’ rules. A check in a box indicates that the committee adopted a rule or a closely related variation on it. An empty box indicates that a committee did not address that subject. Certain checks and blank boxes are footnoted to offer additional detail on a particular committee’s rule or lack of a rule. In some cases, a single table note is used to offer additional detail on a rule or circumstances that affect more than one committee’s rules.

Table 2 provides the text of House committee rules regarding the authorization and issuance of subpoenas. It does not include all references to subpoenas, such as the required quorum to authorize a subpoena or other provisions ancillary to subpoena authorization requirements.

Notes:

- a. Denotes committees that have rules that explicitly address the subpoena authority of subcommittees.
- b. Even in cases where a committee has delegated the power to authorize and issue subpoenas to its chair pursuant to Rule XI, clause 2(m)(3), the committee retains the ability to meet and, with a majority quorum present, vote to authorize and issue a subpoena.
- c. The power to authorize and issue subpoenas may be delegated to the chair pursuant to such rules and under such limitations as the committee may prescribe.
- d. A subpoena may be authorized and issued by the committee, or any subcommittee with the concurrence of the chair and after consultation with the ranking minority member.
- e. The chair and ranking minority member together issue subpoenas on behalf of the committee and investigative subcommittees. The committee rule permitting adjudicatory subcommittees to authorize subpoenas does not indicate who may issue them.
- f. Unless there are exigent circumstances, the chair, when authorizing a subpoena, will provide written notice to the ranking minority member a specified period in advance of the issuance of a subpoena, and such notice shall include a full copy of the proposed subpoena, including any proposed document schedule.
- g. The chair’s advanced written notice to the ranking member is to include justification for the proposed subpoena in addition to a copy of the proposed subpoena and any production schedules.
- h. No subpoena shall issue under authority of the chair if a majority of the members of the committee, within the specified consultation period, request of the chair in writing a special meeting of the committee to consider the proposed subpoena.
- i. The committee has authority to authorize subpoenas. This authority is delegated to the chair if the House has adjourned for a period of longer than three days. Under these circumstances, the Small Business Committee rules also require the chair to consult with the ranking member before authorizing a subpoena.
- j. The rule states that the committee’s requirement for a majority vote to authorize a subpoena may be waived by the ranking minority member.
- k. The committee is to issue a subpoena. When the House is not in session for more than three legislative days, the chair may issue a subpoena in consultation with the ranking minority member.
- l. The rule states that the chair may authorize and issue a subpoena if “a specific request for a subpoena has not been previously rejected by either the Committee or subcommittee.”
- m. The committee, by a majority of the members voting, may authorize and issue a subpoena. The rule does not specify who is authorized to sign a subpoena.
- n. The resolution that established the select committee, H.Res. 503 (117th Congress), provided subpoena authority to the chair and exempted the select committee from the requirement to adopt committee rules.
- o. The chair or the chair’s designee may sign a subpoena.

Senate Rules on Subpoenas

Senate committees and subcommittees are authorized to subpoena witnesses and documents (Rule XXVI, paragraph 1). No additional details specific to authorizing or issuing subpoenas appear in Rule XXVI.¹⁵

Senate Committees' Rules on Subpoenas

If a Senate committee meets to consider one or more subpoenas for a witness, witnesses, or documents, it meets in a markup session, and Senators may offer amendments and motions, make points of order, and engage the relevant procedures and procedural strategy that could also occur in a markup of legislation. The Senate Office of Legal Counsel may advise committees on subpoenas.

Most Senate committees in their rules have also delegated authority to issue subpoenas to their chair together with the ranking minority member or to the chair with the ranking minority member's approval. Some committees' rules are explicit on procedures for subcommittees to authorize subpoenas.

Other provisions pertaining to subpoenas, but not directly relating to authorizing or issuing them, may appear in committees' rules. The Select Committee on Ethics has a unique rule for withdrawing a subpoena. The committee by a recorded vote of no fewer than four members may withdraw a subpoena that it had authorized or that the chair and vice chair together had authorized. In addition, the chair and vice chair together could withdraw a subpoena that they had authorized.

The Ethics Committee has rules in addition that

- by a recorded vote of no fewer than four members, may prohibit committee members and staff and outside counsel from publicly identifying a subpoenaed witness prior to the day of the witness's appearance, except as authorized by the chair and vice chair acting together;
- allow the respondent in an adjudicatory hearing to "apply to the Committee" for the subpoena of witnesses and documents in the individual's behalf;
- allow a subpoenaed witness to request, subject to the committee's approval, not to be photographed at a hearing or to have the witness's testimony broadcast or reproduced while testifying;
- require a subpoena to be served sufficiently in advance of a scheduled appearance to provide the witness with "a reasonable period of time" to prepare and to obtain counsel; and
- permit service of a subpoena by any person 18 years of age or older designated by the chair or vice chair.

Four other committees have additional rules that pertain to subpoenas, but not specifically to their authorization or issuance.

A rule of the Foreign Relations Committee deals with the return of a subpoena, or of a request to an agency, for documents. The rule states that the return could be a time and place other than a committee meeting.¹⁶ If the return was incomplete or accompanied by an objection, the rule states that is good cause for a hearing of the committee on shortened notice. On such a return, the chair or a member designated by the chair could convene a hearing on four hours' notice to members by telephone or email. One member is a quorum for this hearing, which occurs for the sole purpose of "elucidat[ing] further information about the return and to rule on the objection."

The Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions Committee's investigations and subpoena rule makes information obtained from investigative activity available to committee (or subcommittee) members requesting the information. It is also made available to staff of committee (or subcommittee) members who have been designated in writing by the members, subject to restrictions contained in Senate rules. A committee member may also request information relevant to an investigation to be "summarized in writing as soon as practicable." Moreover, the committee or a subcommittee chair must call an executive session to discuss investigative activity and the issuance of subpoenas in support of this activity at the request of any member.

A rule of the Small Business and Entrepreneurship Committee specifically authorizes the chair to rule on objections or assertions of privilege in response to subpoenas or on questions raised by a committee member or staff.

The Select Committee on Intelligence has a rule on recommending that an individual "be cited for contempt of Congress or that a subpoena be otherwise enforced." A recommendation could not be forwarded to the Senate unless the committee had met and considered the recommendation, provided the individual an opportunity to oppose the recommendation in person or in writing, and agreed by majority vote to forward the recommendation to the Senate.¹⁷

Committees' other procedural rules affect scheduling and conducting meetings to authorize a subpoena. These other rules deal with the notice for and agenda of a meeting, the quorum to conduct business, voting, and consideration. Committee rules also mirror a Senate rule requiring a majority to be physically present, and the concurrence of a majority of the members present, to report (Rule XXVI, paragraph 7).

Explanation of Tables 3 and 4: Committee Subpoena Requirements, Senate Committee Rules, 117th Congress

Table 3 compares committee rules in the 117th Congress on subpoena requirements across the 20 Senate committees. The 16 standing committees with legislative authority are listed in alphabetical order in the left-most column, followed by the two permanent committees with legislative authority. The two committees without legislative authority appear in the last two positions of the table.¹⁸ The heading contains key terms describing the committees' rules. A check in a box indicates that a committee adopted a rule or a closely related variation on it. An empty box indicates that a committee did not address that subject in its rules. Certain checks and blank boxes are footnoted to offer additional detail on a particular committee's rule or lack of rule. In some cases, a single table note is used to give additional detail for a rule or circumstances that affect more than one committee's rules.

¹⁶ Return in this rule refers to instructions to the individual named on when and where to respond to the subpoena with the documents demanded. The rule makes explicit that a subpoena for documents may specify that the documents be delivered at other times or to other places than a committee meeting.

Table 4 provides the text of Senate committee rules regarding the authorization and issuance of subpoenas. It does not include all references to subpoenas, such as the required quorum to authorize a subpoena or other provisions ancillary to subpoena authorization requirements.

¹⁸ The Select Committee on Ethics has authority to report by recommendation or resolution "additional rules or regulations" that the committee "shall determine to be necessary or desirable to insure proper standards of conduct by Members of the Senate, and by officers or employees of the Senate, in the performance of their duties and the discharge of their responsibilities." S.Res. 338, §2(a)(5), agreed to in the Senate July 24, 1964.

Notes:

- a. Denotes committees that have rules that explicitly address the subpoena authority of subcommittees.
- b. Even in cases where a committee has delegated the power to authorize and issue subpoenas to its chair, the committee itself presumably still retains the ability to meet and, with a majority quorum present, vote to authorize and issue a subpoena, pursuant to Senate Rule XXVI(1).
- c. The committee’s subcommittees are authorized to adopt rules concerning subpoenas that need not be consistent with the rules of the committee provided that the subcommittee meets certain restrictions regarding the notification and timing of issued subpoenas.
- d. The preamble to the committee’s rules states that the committee and its subcommittees are authorized to require the attendance of witnesses or the production of documents by subpoena. However, the rule specific to investigations (Rule VI) delegates subpoena authority to the chair and ranking minority member, acting together.
- e. The committee may, by a majority vote, delegate the authority to issue subpoenas to the chair of the committee or a subcommittee or to any member designated by such chairman.
- f. Prior to the issuance of any subpoena, the ranking minority member and any other member “so requesting” shall be notified of the subject of the subpoena, the nature of the information sought, and the information’s relationship to the investigation. The rules of Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions Committee also include the caveat “except where the chair of the committee or subcommittee, in consultation with the ranking minority member, determines that such notice would unduly impede the investigation.”
- g. The chair, with the approval of the ranking minority member of the committee, has subpoena authority. However, the chair may subpoena attendance or production of documents without the approval of the ranking minority member when the chair has not received notification from the ranking minority member within a specified period of time. If the ranking minority member disapproves, the committee, by majority vote, may authorize the subpoena.
- h. The committee or the chair, with the approval of the ranking minority member of the committee, has subpoena authority. The chair may subpoena attendance or production of documents without the approval of the ranking minority member when the chair has not received notification from the ranking minority member within a specified period of time.
- i. The committee’s rules do not specifically address subpoena authority.
- j. After consultation with the ranking minority member, the chair, or a member designated by the chair, may issue a subpoena. The subpoena shall “briefly state the matter to which the witness is expected to testify or the documents to be produced.”
- k. The rule does not specify who is authorized to sign or issue an authorized subpoena.
- l. The committee’s rule allows the committee to poll “steps of an investigation, including issuance of subpoenas,” but otherwise does not specify procedures regarding the authorization or issuance of subpoenas.
- m. The chair may issue a subpoena (1) with the agreement of the ranking minority member, (2) when authorized by a majority of the committee members, or (3) within the scope of an investigation that was authorized by the chair and ranking minority member together or by a majority of the committee members.

- n. The committee does not have a rule specific to subpoena authority, but its rule on quorums for business meetings suggests that the committee may issue subpoenas. Rule 2(a) states, “for the purpose of approving the issuance of a subpoena or approving a committee resolution, six members of the committee, at least three of whom are members of the minority party, constitute a quorum.”
- o. Subpoenas shall be signed by either the chair or the vice chair. The rule also requires that subpoenas be served with a copy of the committee rules and a brief statement of purpose regarding the committee’s proceedings. The committee or the chair and vice chair acting jointly may withdraw any subpoena authorized for issuance.
- p. A subpoena may be authorized at a meeting or by proxies. At the request of a committee member, a subpoena may be authorized only at a meeting.
- q. The rule states that the vice chair, in addition to the chair or any member of the committee designated by the chair, may issue a subpoena authorized by the committee.
- r. The chair or a member designated by the committee may sign a subpoena.

All information obtained pursuant to such investigative activity shall be made available as promptly as possible to each member of the committee requesting same, or to any assistant to a member of the committee designated by such member in writing, but the use of any such information is subject to restrictions imposed by the rules of the Senate.
