Background

In 2014, the House adopted H.R. 1771 to strengthen U.S. economic sanctions imposed on North Korea, citing that country's persistent "nuclear, ballistic missile, and other WMD threats; its counterfeiting of U.S. currency and other illicit activities; its misuse of the financial system through money laundering; its severe human rights abuses; and other activities that violate applicable United Nations Security Council resolutions, including conventional arms trafficking, WMD proliferation, and luxury goods imports...."¹ The House also noted its frustration with the Obama Administration's policy of "strategic patience" in confronting these threats. The measure failed to gain traction in the Senate, however, and died at the close of the 113th Congress.

In the intervening months since, North Korea has continued its weapons tests—including a reported detonation of a hydrogen bomb, its fourth nuclear weapons test—on January 6, 2016. North Korea's continued belligerence has moved Congress to revisit measures to strengthen sanctions the United States imposes on North Korea.

Three legislative proposals appear to have backing to contribute to a final enactment; the three, however, differ significantly in their approaches to presidential authorities, the threshold of behavior that would trigger sanctions, and creation of a new fund—to be funded by the collection of fines and penalties from sanctions scofflaws—to address human rights challenges in North Korea.

This report compares S. 1747, the North Korea Sanctions Enforcement Act of 2015, as introduced in the Senate by Senator Menendez on July 9, 2015; S. 2144, the North Korea Sanctions and Policy Enhancement Act of 2015, introduced in the Senate by Senator Gardner on October 6, 2015; and H.R. 757, the North Korea Sanctions Enforcement Act of 2015, introduced in the House by Representative Royce on February 5, 2015, and passed, as amended by the Committee on Foreign Affairs, by the House on January 12, 2016, by a vote of 418-2.

How to Read the Table Comparing the Legislative Proposals

The following table states S. 1747 in order and in its entirety in the left-hand column. The middle column aligns provisions from S. 2144 that are similar or identical to those in S. 1747, leaving out a restatement of identical text whenever possible. The right-hand column presents H.R. 757, also correlated with S. 1747. Comments are marked in italics; italicized phrases such as "Identical language" or "No comparable language" in the middle and right columns denote comparisons to S. 1747 (the left column) unless otherwise indicated. Text that differs only slightly among the three bills is provided but marked in bold in a manner to make it clear what is different among the three provisions.

¹ U.S. Congress, House Committee on Foreign Affairs, North Korea Sanctions Enforcement Act of 2014, Report to Accompany H.R. 1771, 113th Cong., 2nd sess., July 28, 2014, H.Rept. 113-560 (Washington: GPO, 2014), pp. 22, 28. H.R. 1771 (113th Congress) precedes H.R. 757 (114th Congress), was passed by the House by Voice Vote on July 28, 2014. In the Senate, the measure was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations, though received no further consideration.

SEC. 201. DETERMINATIONS WITH RESPECT TO NORTH KOREA AS A JURISDICTION OF PRIMARY MONEY LAUNDERING CONCERN.

Nearly identical.

(a) Findings.—Congress makes the following findings:

(1) The Undersecretary of the Treasury for Terrorism and Financial Intelligence, who is responsible for safeguarding the financial system against illicit use, money laundering, terrorist financing, and the proliferation of weapons of mass destruction, has repeatedly expressed concern about North Korea’s misuse of the international financial system as follows:

(A) In 2006, the Undersecretary stated that, given North Korea’s “counterfeiting of U.S. currency, narcotics trafficking and use of accounts worldwide to conduct proliferation-related transactions, the line between illicit and licit North Korean money is nearly invisible” and urged financial institutions worldwide to “think carefully about the risks of doing any North Korea-related business.”.

(B) In 2011, the Undersecretary stated that “North Korea remains intent on engaging in proliferation, selling arms as well as bringing in material,” and was “aggressively pursuing the effort to establish front companies.”.

(C) In 2013, the Undersecretary stated, in reference to North Korea’s distribution of high-quality counterfeit United States currency, that “North Korea is continuing quality counterfeit United States currency, that “North Korea is continuing to try to pass a supernote into the international financial system”; and

(ii) the Department of the Treasury would soon introduce new currency with improved security features to protect against counterfeiting by the Government of North Korea.

(2) The Financial Action Task Force, an intergovernmental body whose purpose is to develop and promote national and international policies to combat money laundering and terrorist financing, has repeatedly—

(A) expressed concern at deficiencies in North Korea’s regimes to combat money laundering and terrorist financing;

(B) urged North Korea to adopt a plan of action to address significant deficiencies in these regimes and the serious threat they pose to the integrity of the international financial system;

(C) urged all jurisdictions to apply countermeasures to protect the international financial system from ongoing and substantial money laundering and terrorist financing risks emanating from North Korea;

(D) urged all jurisdictions to advise their financial institutions to give special attention to business relationships and transactions with North Korea, including North Korean companies and financial institutions; and

(E) called on all jurisdictions—

(c) Strategy To Improve International Implementation and Enforcement of UN North Korea-Specific Sanctions.—The President shall direct the Secretary of State, in coordination with other departments and agencies, as appropriate, to develop a strategy to improve international implementation and enforcement of United Nations North Korea-specific sanctions. This strategy should include elements—

(1) to increase the number of countries submitting reports to the United Nations Panel of Experts, including developing a list of targeted countries where effective implementation and enforcement of United Nations sanctions would reduce the North Korean threat;

(2) to encourage member states to cooperate and share information with the panel in order to help facilitate investigations;

(3) to expand cooperation with the panel of experts;

(4) to provide technical assistance to member states to implement United Nations sanctions, including developing the capacity to enforce sanctions through improved export control regulations and customs and border patrol systems;

(5) to harness existing United States Government initiatives and assistance programs, as appropriate, to improve sanctions implementation and enforcement; and

(6) to increase outreach to the people of North Korea, and to support independent, non-governmental journalistic, humanitarian, and other institutions engagement in North Korea.
