chief said New Delhi would soon purchase 40 Russian-built Sukhoi-30 combat aircraft for about $1.6 billion. Also, at least five policemen were killed and another six injured in a landmine explosion in the Chhattisgarh state. Maoist rebels were believed responsible.

- 02/06/07 — U.S. Representatives Jim McDermott and Joe Wilson were elected as co-chairs of the 184-member Congressional Caucus on India and Indian-Americans. On the same day, an Indian official said that India would by mid-2007 issue a tender for 126 combat aircraft it plans to purchase for up to $10 billion.
- 02/04/07 — Moderate Kashmiri separatist leader Mirwaiz Umar Farooq urged armed militants to declare a temporary cease-fire that could allow New Delhi to reduce some of its troop strength in the region.
- 02/03/07 — Prime Minister Singh said the Pakistani government was “saying the right thing” in recent statements rejecting armed militancy as a solution to the Kashmir problem, adding that he had accepted an invitation to visit Islamabad in the near future. On the same day, authorities in Kashmir exhumed the bodies of five men who may have been civilians killed in “staged encounters” with security forces. Shortly after, four policemen, including two senior officers, had been arrested, and separatist groups called for a protest strike which shut down most of Srinagar on 2/6.
- 02/01/07 — A top Congress Party leader in the Assam state was assassinated by suspected ULFA rebels.
- 01/31/07 — India’s central bank warned that rising inflation and surging stock and property markets were “signs of overheating” in the country’s economy. On the same day, India’s Tata Steel won a $12.2 billion bid for the Anglo-Dutch firm Corus, creating the world’s fifth largest steelmaker in India’s largest-ever foreign takeover.
- 01/30/07 — India regained full investment-grade status after a 15-year hiatus when Standard & Poor’s upgraded India’s sovereign rating.
- 01/28/07 — India’s air force chief said New Delhi was building an aerospace defense command aimed at preventing possible attacks from space.
- 01/26/07 — Officials from India, Pakistan, and Iran reportedly agreed on a pricing formula for Iranian natural gas, thus potentially clearing a major obstacle to the planned construction of a pipeline to deliver such gas to India via Pakistan. India’s oil minister later said he expected a final deal by June. The U.S. government is opposed to the $7 billion project.
- 01/25/07 — Russian President Putin ended a two-day visit to New Delhi, where he met with top Indian officials; signed several bilateral agreements on energy, science, and space cooperation; and offered to sell four new 1,000-megawatt nuclear reactors to India. On the same day, the Indian army claimed that Pakistani and Indian troops had exchanged small arms fire across the Kashmiri LOC. Also, several bomb blasts killed 2 people and injured 7 others in the Assam state. Police blamed ULFA rebels.
- 01/23/07 — Foreign Minister Mukherjee met with top Afghan officials in Kabul, where he announced a $100 million increase in Indian aid to Afghanistan.

On the same day, a coalition of women’s rights groups accused the state-backed Sulwa Judum anti-Maoist militia of raping and abusing many of the women they are supposed to protect. Also, ULFA rebels warned all Hindi-speaking people to “stay away” from Assam.
- 01/17/07 — The USS Trenton, a decommissioned American amphibious transport dock purchased by India for $44 million, became the second-largest ship in the Indian navy as it set sail with six surplus Sikorsky UH-3H Sea King helicopters purchased for another $39 million. On the same day, India and China held a 31st round of talks to resolve their decades-old border disputes. Also, New Delhi lodged a formal protest with Islamabad over an alleged cross-border shooting incident that left two Indian soldiers injured. Finally, two civilians were killed in a suspected ULFA-launched bomb attack on a marketplace in the Assam state.
- 01/16/07 — Prime Minister Singh said his government was willing to negotiate with any northeastern separatists who abjure violence. On the same day, seven policemen were killed in a landmine blast triggered by Maoist rebels in the Chhattisgarh state.
- 01/15/07 — Prime Minister Singh attended the 5th India-ASEAN summit meeting in the Philippines, where he sought to forward India’s “Look East” policy by calling for a Pan Asian free trade agreement.
- 01/13/07 — External Affairs Minister Mukherjee traveled to Islamabad to meet with his Pakistani counterpart, the first such visit in more than one year. The two men agreed to launch in mid-March a fourth round of the Composite Dialogue that began in 2004. On the same day, ULFA rebels issued a threat to kill Congress Party politicians in the Assam state in retaliation for attacks on their cadres. Also, four Maoist militants were shot dead by police in the Andhra Pradesh state.
- 01/10/07 — India’s lead negotiator on civil nuclear cooperation with the United States, Shyam Saran, warned that existing stipulations proscribing the reprocessing spent fuel and further nuclear testing could kill the deal altogether. On the same day, in a rare statement on policy, the Indian Army called “dangerous” any proposal to demilitarize Kashmir, claiming it would “dilute” India’s control of the region.
- 01/09/07 — Pakistan released from jail 115 India fishermen in a gesture of goodwill ahead of foreign minister-level talks. On the same day, up to 13,000 Indian army and paramilitary troops fanned out across the Assam state in what was termed the “largest-ever” operations against ULFA rebels there. Also, Assam’s chief minister said there was “no doubt” that the ULFA was working under the instruction of Pakistan’s main intelligence service. Finally, the U.S. chapter of the Paris-based Doctors Without Borders named India’s internal conflicts as one of ten “most underreported humanitarian crises of 2006.”
- 01/08/07 — Prime Minister Singh said he hoped to someday conclude a treaty of security, peace, and friendship with Pakistan. Islamabad said such a treaty would be possible only after a resolution of the Kashmir dispute.
